*Type II shelf life may be retested to conform with the applicable specification- at which time the material is reapproved for use for another shelf life period. All the products listed here are classified as Type II.

The U.S. Government Defense General Supply Center has defined the shelf life or retest periods which are more conservative than those defined by Anderol Inc. (A Unit of Kaufman Holdings Corporation). The shelf life periods listed in this publication are based on our expertise and knowledge of the chemistry, performance, application of the product, and the assumption that the proper care and storage on the product in its original container is in practice. Use of these products in Department of Defense applications may require different shelf life notations.
